

Pinot Noir`Devils Corner` Tamar Ridge 2020

Region

The whole island of Tasmania is an official wine zone and whilst the island is not 'regionalised', northern and southern Tasmania provide quite distinct viticultural areas. The island has a range of microclimates and soil types which gives the island its diversity of character. Central to the exploration of the northern vineyard areas is the city of Launceston located on the banks of the Tamar River. Southern Tasmania incorporates wine areas that are within easy reach of Hobart and are carefully located for maximum exposure to the sun and protection from the cold southerly winds.

Producer

The vineyards were first established in Tasmania during colonial settlement. However, in more recent times, Tamar Ridge has established its own success story as part of Tasmania's modern wine industry. The Devils Corner is a section of the Tamar River near the Kayena Vineyard. Known as a calm area for sailors to berth away from the wild waters of Whirlpool Reach to the south, these wines are a true reflection of vines cultivated in prevailing cool conditions.

Tasting Notes

Bright cherry red in colour with purple tinges, the nose has ripe spicy plum aromas with underlying cherry fruit and savoury nuances. The palate is soft with flavours of ripe plum, blackberry and red cherry fruit with hints of spice and savoury complexity. This wine is light in body but structured with fine, silky tannins and a long supple finish.

Food

Grilled sardines, lightly spiced curries and roast meats.
